Day 2

Cancun - Vehicle - Chichén Itzá - Vehicle - Hacienda selva Maya - Vehicle - Cancun

All day

Today we will visit one of the most important examples of the Mayan-Toltec civilization in Yucatán, Chichen Itza, exploring the fusion of Mayan construction techniques with new elements from central Mexico. As one of Mexico's most visited tourist destinations, it was granted World Heritage Site status in 1988 by UNESCO World Heritage Site and was recently selected as one of the New Seven Wonders of the World. After learning all about the dazzling ancient city, we will head to Cenote Ik-Kil to feel relaxed and refreshed in the uniquely peaceful and beautiful environment.

Itinerary:

Cancun → Chichén Itzá(90mins) → Cenote Ik-Kil (90mins) → Suytun cenote (30mins) → Cancun

Please note that this schedule may be subject to change depending on the actual circumstances.

All day

Chichén Itzá

As the best-preserved Mayan city-state ruins in the world, this ancient capital of the Mayan Empire, which was excavated in 514 AD, has many beautiful ancient buildings, such as the Castillo Pyramid, the Cuju Ball Court, the Warrior Temple, the Oval Observatory, etc. Whether it is the architectural style, artistic attainments, religious concepts, or scientific achievements, they are all breathtaking, attracting countless scholars and tourists to come and admire. Among them, the Quetzalcoatl Pyramid is listed as one of the new seven wonders of the world. The locals worship a kind of sacred bird that is believed to come from heaven, so they specially designed such steps to create an echo similar to the sound of a bird, as if they were talking to the gods. If you come here, you might as well try to clap your hands facing the pyramid and you can hear this echo.

Cenote Ik-Kil

Ik Kil is a cenote outside Pisté in the Tinúm Municipality, Yucatán, Mexico. The cenote is open to the sky with the water level about 26 meters (85 ft) below ground level. There is a carved stairway that leads down to a swimming platform. Ik Kil was considered sacred by the Mayans who used the site as a location for human sacrifice to their rain god, Chaac.

Suytun cenote

A thin bluestone path extends into a turquoise pool. This is the internet-famous patio "Suito" that has been liked thousands of times on "Little Red Book" and Instagram. It is not very big, but its unique landscape makes people want to come here to take pictures. It is an Aguadas limestone pit. Its natural beauty is breathtaking. The stone piers in the stone kiln make it look so mysterious. The water in the pool is relatively shallow compared to the towering stone walls. It is like a huge open church. The crack in the ceiling of the church is the best wealth and highlight of the entire "Suito Patio". It is in an almost perfect position, and the light shines right in the center of the natural well. If the air is humid or there is some dust in the air, that is the best effect for taking pictures. Standing at the end of the bluestone path in the cave, in the middle of the patio, a beam of light shines directly from the top, like an angel's arms embracing you.

Xcaret Park

Located on the Caribbean coast, Xcaret Theme Park was originally a Mayan site. Later, it was discovered that there were several underground rivers with clear water like jade. So in 1990, a local Mexican construction group cooperated with the Mexican Institute of Human and History to start construction and successfully built today's theme park that combines ecology and ancient culture. It became an instant hit and became one of the world's famous tourist destinations. The park has more than 40 attractions suitable for all ages, making it an ideal place for family travel! In the park, you can not only swim in underground rivers, explore mysterious caves, walk on jungle trails, and see animals that live in the park: deer, jaguars, flamingos and other exotic birds; you can also discover new colors in the butterfly house and discover the mysteries of the ocean in the coral reef aquarium. There are several attractions worth visiting in the park, such as Mayan ruins, the Mexican Folklore Museum, the traditional Hacienda Henequenera estate and the Guadalupe Church. In addition, you can also experience Mexican culture by watching pre-Hispanic dances, equestrian performances and the "Xcaret México Espectacular" Mexican-style performance performed by 300 actors.

Las Coloradas Pink Lake

Hidden away on the tip of Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula is a magical place full of color. These stunning cotton-candy pink lakes filled with salt are called Las Coloradas. The region is part of the Río Lagartos Biosphere Reserve, a protected wetlands area home to animals like flamingos, crocodiles, sea turtles, jaguars, and all kinds of sea birds. You may also have seen pictures of the breathtaking pink lakes, one of the most instagrammable spots in Mexico, through various social medias.

Cenote Hubiku

"Hubikú" means "Great Lord" and "Nest of Iguanas" in Mayan. It is located near Temozon in the Yucatan Peninsula. Cenote is a natural limestone cave, about 27 meters deep, almost circular in shape, with a diameter of about 50 meters. The water in the cave is clear. This is a natural "swimming pool" formed underground. Going down the stone steps, you can swim in the sapphire water. This is definitely a wonderful experience not to be missed. At noon, the sun shines directly from the top, like an angel with open arms, like a fairyland on earth.

Day 5

Xochimilco, Mexico - Vehicle - University City, Mexico - Vehicle - National Museum of Anthropology, Mexico

All day

Departing early in the morning, we'll first take a boat tour of Xochimilco, known as Mexico's "Little Venice." Its dense network of lakes, rivers, land, and islands creates a wondrous aquatic world. We'll then visit the National Autonomous University of Mexico, known for its unique architecture and murals. Finally, at the National Museum of Anthropology, we'll witness the early development of civilization in the Americas and marvel at the remarkable achievements of ancient people.

Itinerary:

Xochimilco (100 min) → University City (50 min) → National Museum of Anthropology (120 min)

All day

Xochimilco

Xochimilco, designated a UNESCO World Heritage Site in 1987, is one of central Mexico's most important archaeological sites. Xochimilco means "place where flowers are sown" in the Huatl language, and it is now Mexico's most important flower market. The crisscrossing canals here seem worlds apart from the bustling city of Mexico. A cruise along the canals in one of the colorful, Mexican-style boats offers a unique experience, allowing you to take in the scenery of Xochimilco.

National Autonomous University of Mexico

Located in the university city south of Mexico City, the main campus of the National Autonomous University of Mexico (UNAM) is located in the university city. This university has a long history and is one of the best universities in Mexico and the highest ranked in Latin America. Many of the UNAM's vivid murals are listed as World Cultural Heritage. Its campus was designed by several famous architects, and the murals on campus were created by many mural masters such as Diego Rivera. The entire campus has now been listed as a World Heritage Site by UNESCO.

National Museum of Anthropology

The founding of the Museo de Antropología de Mexico City began with the discovery and preservation of the "Sun Stone," a revered object of the Aztecs. In 1520, the Spanish buried the stone during their ravages of the Aztec capital. It wasn't until 1790 that the stone was rediscovered. It was excavated and preserved as a precious cultural heritage, marking the beginning of the Museo de Antropología's activities. The Museo de Antropología de Mexico City stands out among museums worldwide for its unique and captivating collections. Its collections reflect not only the development of early civilization in Mexico but throughout the Americas, showcasing the glorious history of the American people for the first time to the world. Visitors to this renowned museum marvel at the remarkable achievements of ancient Americans while also shedding long-held historical prejudices.

Day 6

Paseo de la Reforma, Mexico - Vehicle - Teotihuacán, Mexico - Vehicle - Plaza de la Constitución, Mexico

All day

Mexico City, a welcoming, vibrant city steeped in millennia of civilization. In the morning, we will walk along the famous Paseo de la Reforma to admire the formal architecture and monumental statues commemorating the history of Mexico and the Americas. Afterwards, we will proceed to Teotihuacán, known as the "place where the gods made man", to climb the Pirámide del Sol and look out over the Path of the Dead and the Pirámide de la Luna, with a view of the entire spectacular ruins area. Afternoon, we will go to the Basílica de Nuestra Señora de Guadalupe, then stop by the Palace of Fine Arts to take pictures, and finally we will go to the Plaza de la Constitución, the plaza is like the heart of Mexico, leading Mexico to beat. Not far from the square are the ruins of the majestic Templo Mayor and the construction of the Catedral Metropolitana. The plaza is also surrounded by historic Spanish colonial buildings. This reflects the busy life of the city.

Itinerary:

Emplumada (120 min) → Basílica de Nuestra Señora de Guadalupe (60 min) → Palacio de Bellas Artes

(exterior, 20 min) → Plaza de la Constitución (2 hrs., incl. visit to Cathedral of the Bishop, exterior of the National Palace, exterior of the ruins of the Great Temple, etc.)

All day

Paseo de la Reforma

Paseo de la Reforma is a 12-kilometer-long avenue in Mexico City. Built by King Maximilian I and named Avenida Regina in honor of his consort, Queen Carlota, upon its inauguration, it now bears the name in commemoration of the liberalizing reforms of 19th-century Mexican President Benito Juárez. It is modeled after European boulevards, such as Vienna's Ringstrasse and Paris's Champs-Élysées. Along the Paseo de la Reforma are numerous monuments honoring figures and events in Mexican and American history, including Cuauhtémoc, Simón Bolívar, José de San Martín, and Christopher Columbus, as well as a fountain commemorating the nationalization of Mexican oil. The most notable of these is the Angel of Independence Monument.

Teotihuacán

Teotihuacan, located approximately 50 kilometers from Mexico City, is a remnant of an ancient civilization. Also known as the City of the Gods, it was designated a UNESCO World Heritage Site in 1987. Two pyramids stand side by side, separated by a 2-kilometer-long avenue known as the Way of the Dead. The north-south, 2-kilometer-long Avenue of the Dead is the heart of this ancient city. The most striking features of the avenue are the Pyramid of the Sun and the Pyramid of the Moon, flanking them. The Pyramid of the Sun, located to the east, is the third largest pyramid in the world and is surrounded by numerous altars used for sacrifice. The Pyramid of the Moon, located at the northern end of the Avenue of the Dead, is flanked by the Plaza de la Luna, a complex of 12 temples and altars. Climb the massive Pyramid of the Sun and gaze out over the Way of the Dead and the Pyramid of the Moon, offering breathtaking views of the entire ruins.

Basilica of Our Lady of Guadalupe

A cult developed around this site after a Christian convert named Juan Diego claimed in December 1531 that the Virgin Mary appeared before him on the Cerro del Tepeyac (Tepeyac Hill). After numerous sightings, so the story goes, the lady's image was miraculously emblazoned on Diego's cloak, causing a bishop to believe the story and build a shrine in her honor. To this day the basílica remains a place of pilgrimage and worship.

Palace of Fine Arts

Construction on the iconic building began in 1905 under Italian architect Adamo Boari, who favored neoclassical and art nouveau styles. Complications arose as the heavy marble shell sank into the spongy subsoil, and then the Mexican Revolution intervened. Architect Federico Mariscal eventually finished the interior in the 1930s, utilizing the more modern art deco style. With art nouveau on the outside and art deco on the inside, the Palacio de Bellas Artes (Palace of Fine Arts) is considered one of the most spectacular buildings from this era.

Plaza de la Constitución

The Plaza de la Constitución is to Mexico City what the Eiffel Tower is to Paris and the Colosseum is to Rome. It's a must-see destination in Mexico City and the heart of Mexico. Rebuilt by Spanish colonists after the destruction of Tenochtitlan, the capital of the Aztec Empire, it has always been bustling, whether in the 16th century (when it was built on the ruins) or in the 18th century (when it became a bustling market), and even today, when it serves as the seat of government, the bustle continues. In front of the square are the remains of the Cathedral and the Templo Mayor, the former center of the square. Upon their arrival, the Spanish destroyed the Templo Mayor and built the Cathedral (Catedral Metropolitana) on top of it, thus obscuring centuries of civilization and this important pre-Spanish temple. In the late 1970s, cable company workers accidentally uncovered the temple's structure while working, prompting archaeologists to search for its remains.
