Cenote Hubiku

Cenote Hubiku is a popular cenote complex located between Valladolid and the Ek Balam ruins. The underground, semi open cenote has an opening in its roof where both natural lights and tree roots cascade towards its waters. At times, a small waterfall cascades through the gap sending a spray of water down into the cenote. In fact, the Maya name Hubiku refers to its vast size and translates to "Iguanas Nest" or "the Great Lord".

Chichén Itzá

Chichén Itzá is a complex of Mayan ruins on Mexico's Yucatán Peninsula. A massive step pyramid, known as El Castillo or Temple of Kukulcan, dominates the ancient city, which thrived from around 600 A.D. to the 1200s. Graphic stone carvings survive at structures like the ball court, Temple of the Warriors and the Wall of the Skulls. Nightly sound-and-light shows illuminate the buildings' sophisticated geometry.

Cenote Ik-Kil

Ik Kil is a cenote outside Pisté in the Tinúm Municipality, Yucatán, Mexico. The cenote is open to the sky with the water level about 26 metres (85 ft) below ground level. There is a carved stairway that leads down to a swimming platform. Ik Kil was considered sacred by the Mayans who used the site as a location for human sacrifice to their rain god, Chaac.

Valladolid

Attractive and full of nuances of flavors, colors, traditions and natural beauty, the city of Valladolid in Yucatan, is a mosaic surrounded by colonial architecture and the mysticism that encloses the great Mayan culture shown in its archaeological zones. It is only two hours away from Mérida and Cancun and is one of the most important and beautiful tourist cities of the State.
